Pergamon

Public Relations Review 29 (2003) 499–502

Public Relations Review

Index, Volume 29, 2003

By Title

A matter of chance: the emergence of probability and the rise of public relations, Robert E. Brown, 385–399 (4).

An investigation of the sources of influence of corporate public relations practitioners, Julie O'Neil, 159–170 (2).

Antecedents of two-way symmetry in classical Greek rhetoric: the rhetoric of Isocrates, Charles Marsh, 351–369 (3).

Barriers to communication management in the executive suite, Betteke van Ruler and Rob de Lange, 145–158 (2).

British newspapers privilege health and medicine topics over other science news, Emma Weitkamp, 321–334 (3).

Can your institution's name influence constituent response? An initial assessment of consumer response to college names, D. F. Treadwell, 185–198 (2).

China's agenda building and image polishing in the U.S.: assessing an international public relations campaign, Juyan Zhang and Glen T. Cameron, 13–28 (1).

Commentary, Public relations is the architect of its future: counsel or courtier? Pros offer opinions, John F. Budd, Jr., 375–383 (4).

Corporate intelligence dissemination as a consequence of intranet effectiveness: an empirical study, Marie E. Murgolo-Poore, Leyland F. Pitt, Pierre R. Berthon, and Gerard Prendergast, 171–184 (2).

Crisis management planning and the threat of bioterrorism, Brenda J. Wrigley, Charles T. Salmon, and Hyun Soon Park, 281–290 (3).

Ethical standards appear to change with age and ideology: a survey of practitioners, Yungwook Kim and Youjin Choi, 79–90 (1).

Expanding the organization-public relationship scale: exploring the role that structural and personal commitment play in organization-public relationships, Stephen D. Bruning, 309–320 (3).

How corporate America grieves: responses to September 11th in public relations advertising, Katherine N. Kinnick, 443–459 (4).

'I thought it would be more glamorous': preconceptions and misconceptions among students in the public relations principles course, Shannon A. Bowen, 199–214 (2).

Journalists' hostility toward public relations: an historical analysis, Denise E. DeLorme and Fred Fedler, 99–124 (2).

doi:10.1016/S0363-8111(03)00082-1

Media relations and the internet: how Fortune 500 company websites assist journalists in news gathering, Coy Callison, 29–42 (1).
Merck and AIDS activists: engagement as a framework for extending issues management, Maureen Taylor, Gabriel M. Vasquez, and John Doorley, 257–270 (3).
Perceptions of public relations web sites by computer industry journalists, David Hachigian and Kirk Hallahan, 43–62 (1).
Public relations and propaganda in framing the Iraq war: a preliminary review, Ray Eldon Hiebert, 243–256 (3).
Public relations and the new golden age of Spain: a confluence of democracy, economic development and the media, Donn James Tilson and Pilar Saura Pérez, 125–144 (2).
Public relations and the web: organizational problems, gender, and institution type, Michael Ryan, 335–350 (3).
Public relations battles and wars: journalistic clichés and the potential for conflict resolution. Judith Scrimger and Trudie Richards, 485–492 (4).
Public relations in Taiwan: roles, professionalism, and relationship to marketing, Ming-Yi Wu and Maureen Taylor, 473–483 (4).
Public relations licensing in Brazil: Evolution and the views of professionals, Juan-Carlos Molleda and Andréia Athaydes, 271–280 (3).
St. Paul as a public relations practitioner: a metatheoretical speculation on messianic communication and symmetry, R. E. Brown, 1–12 (1).
Stormy weather: testing "stealing thunder" as a crisis communication strategy to improve communication flow between organizations and journalists, Laura M. Arpan & Donnalyn Pompper, 291–308 (3).
The first federal public information service, 1920–33: at the US Bureau of Efficiency!, Mordecai Lee, 415–425 (4).
The Oxford Incident: organizational culture's role in an anthrax crisis, Kurt Wise, 461–472 (4).
The relationship between web site design and organizational responsiveness to stakeholders, Michael L. Kent, Maureen Taylor, and William J. White, 63–78 (1).
United Airlines' and American Airlines' online crisis communication following the September 11 terrorist attacks, Clark F. Greer and Kurt D. Moreland, 427–441 (4).
W.L. Mackenzie King: Rockefeller's other public relations counselor, Kirk Hallahan, 401–414 (4).

By Author

Arpan, Laura M. and Donnalyn Pompper, Stormy weather: testing "stealing thunder" as a crisis communication strategy to improve communication flow between organizations and journalists, 291–308 (3).
Bowen, Shannon A., 'I thought it would be more glamorous': preconceptions and misconceptions among students in the public relations principles course, 199–214 (2).
Brown, R. E., St. Paul as a public relations practitioner: a metatheoretical speculation on messianic communication and symmetry, 1–12 (1).
Brown, Robert E., A matter of chance: the emergence of probability and the rise of public relations, 385–399 (4).
Bruning, Stephen D., Expanding the organization-public relationship scale: exploring the role that structural and personal commitment play in organization-public relationships, 309–320 (3).

Budd, John F. Jr., Commentary, Public relations is the architect of its future: counsel or courtier? Pros offer opinions, 375–383 (4).
Callison, Coy, Media relations and the Internet: how Fortune 500 company websites assist journalists in news gathering, 29–42 (1).
DeLorme, Denise E. and Fred Fedler, Journalists' hostility toward public relations: an historical analysis, 99–124 (2).
Greer, Clark F. and Kurt D. Moreland, United Airlines' and American Airlines' online crisis communication following the September 11 terrorist attacks, 427–441 (4).
Hachigian, David and Kirk Hallahan, Perceptions of public relations web sites by computer industry journalists, 43–62 (1).
Hallahan, Kirk, W.L. Mackenzie King: Rockefeller's other public relations counselor, 401–414 (4).
Hiebert, Ray Eldon, Public relations and propaganda in framing the Iraq war: a preliminary review, 243–256 (3).
Kent, Michael L, Maureen Taylor, and William J. White, The relationship between web site design and organizational responsiveness to stakeholders, 63–78 (1).
Kim, Yungwook and Youjin Choi, Ethical standards appear to change with age and ideology: a survey of practitioners, 79–90 (1).
Kinnick, Katherine N. How corporate America grieves: responses to September 11th in public relations advertising, 443–459 (4).
Lee, Mordecai, The first federal public information service, 1920–33: at the US Bureau of Efficiency!, 415–425 (4).
Marsh, Charles, Antecedents of two-way symmetry in classical Greek rhetoric: the rhetoric of Isocrates, 351–369 (3).
Molleda, Juan-Carlos and Andréia Athaydes, Public relations licensing in Brazil: Evolution and the views of professionals, 271–280 (3).
Murgolo-Poore, Marie E., Leyland F. Pitt, Pierre R. Berthon, and Gerard Prendergast, Corporate intelligence dissemination as a consequence of intranet effectiveness: an empirical study, 171–184 (2).
O'Neil, Julie, An investigation of the sources of influence of corporate public relations practitioners, 159–170 (2).
Ryan, Michael, Public relations and the web: organizational problems, gender, and institution type, 335–350 (3).
Scrimger, Judith and Trudie Richards, Public relations battles and wars: journalistic clichés and the potential for conflict resolution. 485–492 (4).
Taylor, Maureen, Gabriel M. Vasquez, and John Doorley, Merck and AIDS activists: engagement as a framework for extending issues management, 257–270 (3).
Tilson, Donn James and Pilar Saura Pérez, Public relations and the new golden age of Spain: a confluence of democracy, economic development and the media, 125–144 (2).
Treadwell, D. F., Can your institution's name influence constituent response? An initial assessment of consumer response to college names, 185–198 (2).
van Ruler, Betteke and Rob de Lange, Barriers to communication management in the executive suite, 145–158 (2).
Weitkamp, Emma, British newspapers privilege health and medicine topics over other science news, 321–334 (3).
Wise, Kurt, The Oxford Incident: organizational culture's role in an anthrax crisis, 461–472 (4).

Wrigley, Brenda J. Charles T. Salmon, and Hyun Soon Park, Crisis management planning and the threat of bioterrorism, 281–290 (3).
Wu, Ming-Yi and Maureen Taylor, Public relations in Taiwan: roles, professionalism, and relationship to marketing, 473–483 (4).
Zhang, Juyan and Glen T. Cameron, China's agenda building and image polishing in the U.S.: assessing an international public relations campaign, 13–28 (1).

Book Reviews

Barry, Amanda, PR power: inside secrets from the world of spin, (David McKie) 95–97 (1).
Culbertson, Hugh and Ni Chen, WithLinzhi Shi, Public Relations Ethics: Some Foundations (Robert E. Brown), 496–498 (4).
Cunningham, Stanley B., The Idea of Propaganda: A Reconstruction (Ray E. Hiebert), 369–370 (3).
Gower, K. K, Legal and ethical restraints on public relations (Michael Kent), 370–372 (3).
Heath, Robert L., Handbook of Public Relations (Kirk Hallahan), 94 (1).
Kotter, John P. and Dan S. Cohen, The Heart of Change: Real-Life Stories of How People Change Their Organizations (Sheila J. Gibbons), 372–373 (3).
Mickey, Thomas J., Deconstructing Public Relations: Public Relations Criticism, (David McKie and Tiffany Derville), 215–221 (2).
Pratkanis, Anthony and Elliot Aronson, Age of Propaganda: The Everyday Use and Abuse of Persuasion (Ray E. Hiebert), 369–370 (3).
Ries, Al and Laura Ries The fall of advertising & the rise of PR (Robert E. Brown), 90–93 (1).
Salzman, Jason, Making the News: A Guide for Activists and Nonprofits, (Ray E. Hiebert), 498–499 (4).
Sriramesh, Krishnamurthy and Dejan Vercic, eds., The Global Public Relations Handbook: Theory, Research and Practice (Linda Scanlan), 493–495 (4).
Various producers, Truth Merchants: Public Relations and the Media; Public Relations: Media Power; Toxic Sludge is Good for You: The Public Relations Industry Unspun; Propaganda; Goebbels: Master of Propaganda, (Ray E. Hiebert), 223–225 (2).
Vizjak, Andrej and Max Ringlstetter, Eds., Media Management: Leveraging Content for Profitable Growth (James Kristie), 495–496 (4).